I. THE MILITARY SITUATION IN SOUTH VIETNAM

1. The contacts with the enemy which began on 1 July near Con Thien are now reported to have cost the US Marine elements involved 106 killed, 290 wounded, and 5 missing. Included are Marine losses of 15 killed and 51 wounded on 4 July in enemy mortar attacks immediately below the Demilitarized Zone. The enemy body count is now 223 for the four days of action.

3. In addition, the continued artillery, mortar, and rocket attacks on Con Thien, Gio Linh, and Dong Ha this week attest to the continued presence of one or two artillery regiments. The capability to support infantry units south of the DMZ with artillery located within and north of the zone and the short supply line from North Vietnam, make this area especially advantageous to the Communists.

4. On 3 July, two Marine battalion landing teams were airlifted to reinforce the six Marine battalions now conducting Operation CIMARRON in the area immediately below the DMZ.

5. The Communists made their traditional propaganda claims following the Con Thien battle. On 4 July, Radio Hanoi announced that three companies of Marines had been "wiped out" and two others "heavily decimated." The broadcast also claimed that US commanders intentionally ordered air strikes to kill some 40 Americans who had been captured.

Communist Movements of Men and Materiel Into
Kontum Province

6. A North Vietnamese Army (NVA) soldier captured [redacted] of Kontum Province, stated during interrogation that 2,000 replacement troops a month moved into South Vietnam during the three-month period from March to May this year. The prisoner claimed that his unit was working near Communist Base Area 609 in Laos when the troop movements were observed.

7. The Communist troops were reportedly part of an effort intended to reinforce understrength NVA units in South Vietnam in preparation for the monsoon offensive. According to the captive, one group was scheduled for the B-3 Front and the remaining two were to provide replacements to main force units in Communist War Zones "C" and "D."

8. In addition to the troop movements, the prisoner stated that an average of ten trucks loaded with 82-mm. and 120-mm. mortar rounds, small-arms ammunition, and other supplies were seen nightly.

9. Although this area has been a known supply and infiltration point, the claimed number of NVA troops may have been exaggerated. The remoteness of the established base camp areas and the security provided by the Communist-controlled portions of Laos makes this route advantageous to the enemy. Once within South Vietnam, the men and materiel are moved over trails to the coastal flatlands as well as to the southern areas.

VI. OTHER MAJOR DEVELOPMENTS

1. Laotian leaders are continuing to exhibit considerable sensitivity to the possible presence of South Vietnamese or US troops in Laos in connection with the proposed anti-infiltration barrier. In recent discussions with GVN leaders in South Vietnam, Laotian Chief of Staff Oudone Sananikone and his deputy Kouprasith Abhay replied to a GVN offer of assistance in expanding Laotian Government control into Pathet Lao - held areas of the panhandle by limiting such help to "money, arms, and possibly training." Oudone reportedly emphasized that "Vietnamese" assistance should not include putting South Vietnamese or US troops into the Laotian panhandle.
